Serve as a voice for the younger generation at the SAR.

What are your leadership strengths and skills and how will they enhance the SAR Board of Directors?

My leadership strengths are that I am a problem solver and I think outside the box. I listen from all involved and take a logical approach moving forward.

Short Bio:

Hello, my name is Bree Campana. I was born and raised in Chattaroy and moved into Spokane 11 years ago when I was attending college at Spokane Community College. I have an Associate of Arts Degree with a minor in communication studies. I love the city of Spokane and feel very fortunate to call it home. I am an agent at 4 Degrees with the Baxter HomeTeam. I have been an agent for just over 5 years. Early on in my career, I saw that being a real estate agent is much more than just me, and my business. The “image” of an agent impacts and sticks with us all because we are a collective. It was then that I had questions and wanted to get involved at the association level. Mainly to see how things operate, what the benefit is to the members, and being honest, to see how my contributions were being used. I joined the technology committee and served for 3 years. I enjoyed being on that committee and felt it was time well spent. I championed for an app that we could use to view properties on the go, and after sometime, we partnered with Home Spotter. Then, a better option was found and we went with HomeSnap. It felt good to be apart of the change I knew we needed. I knew from being an agent for a short time, that we could and needed to do better when it came to our technology, and I wanted to be a voice for that. One door always opens another. With my involvement on that committee, I became aware of Spokane Realtors Young Professionals Network. The whole mission behind YPN is educating and mentoring agents and I knew that was something I wanted to apart of. 3 years ago, I served on the events committee. The following year I was appointed to the board as the Community Director. This year, I served as the president. I enjoy leadership and take the role seriously. I have a mindset of collobration and growth. Together we can achieve and improve many things, to not only help the agents, but community we serve.
